QUALITY CONTROL SYSTEM (PEER REVIEW) POLICY:

At IJFIRH, we are committed to maintaining the highest standards of academic rigor and quality in our journal. To this end, we use a single anonymized peer review process to ensure that all content is thoroughly reviewed and evaluated before publication.

Under this process, each article submitted to our journal is reviewed by at least two independent reviewers. These reviewers are experts in the relevant field, and they are carefully selected based on their expertise and qualifications.

The peer review process is single anonymized, which means that the identity of the reviewers is not disclosed to the authors. This helps to ensure that the review process is objective and unbiased, and that reviewers are able to provide honest and constructive feedback without fear of retribution.

Each reviewer is asked to evaluate the article based on a set of criteria, including the quality of the research, the clarity and coherence of the writing, and the significance of the findings. Reviewers are also asked to provide feedback on any areas where the article could be improved, and to make recommendations about whether the article should be accepted, revised, or rejected.

Once the reviews are complete, the editor-in-chief will carefully evaluate the feedback and make a decision about whether to accept, revise, or reject the article. Authors will receive feedback on their submission, and they will have the opportunity to revise their work based on the feedback provided.

We believe that this peer review process helps to ensure that all content published in our journal meets the highest standards of academic rigor and quality. We are committed to maintaining this process, and we will continue to work with reviewers and authors to ensure that our journal remains a leading resource for research in Indian medicine and homoeopathy.

Thank you for considering our Quality Control System (Peer Review) policy. We believe that this policy helps to ensure that our content is of the highest quality, and we look forward to working with you in the future.
